Service begins at eleven, but the door will be open at ten: That means a crush to get in, with screaming of women, and men Barely just kept from swearing by dread of the Sabbath day, And swearing the more in their hearts, it were better for women to stay At home, and see to their children, instead of losing their wits Crushed in a trampling crowd, till they go off in fainting fits. No, I ll not face it. How should I sit still in a narrow pew For an hour, with my legs a-cramp, and with nothing on earth to do But stare at the white-washed walls, and gasp for a mouthful of air, And smell the hot peppermint breaths, and the oil in the young buck s hair, And watch how faces grow purple, and bald heads are smoking like, censers? Nay, I will sit by the fire here, and read that last volume of Spencer s. There s more in a sentence of his than in all that this fellow can say, Though he preach for an hour by the clock. So he kicked his boots out of the way. That was his first thought. But hardly had he reached out for his book, And settled him down in an easy chair in the cosiest nook, With a big cigar in his mouth, and the cloud-smoke round his head Curling in wavy rings, when once more he looked up...
