This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1895. Excerpt: . . . nary circumstances of life naturally call for its exercise or profession. We are at times inclined to omit, through mere human respect, the sign of the cross or our prayer at table, we omit the recital of the Angelus, we hide our medal of the Blessed Virgin and the like--and all this in our own houses or where we have a perfect right to have our own way without scandalizing anybody. This is wrong, for we have every reason to be proud of our faith. There are, moreover, few persons who fail to respect a consistent Catholic because of the outward exercise of his faith, when this is done with that gravity and simplicity which both befits religion and indicates a deep conviction. Such manifestation of religious faith often begets inquiry, and leads the stranger who perhaps looks for the redemption of Israel, to find that true religion of Jesus Christ of which we happily and by the superabundant grace of God are the unworthy heirs. Conclusion. --Take unto you, then, the armor of God, that you may be able to resist in the evil day. In all things taking the shield of faith wherewith you may be able to extinguish all the fiery arts of the most wicked one. (Eph. vi, 13-16.) For, as the Saviour whom we adore at this holy season in the humble stable of Bethlehem, has said: Every one that shall confess me before men, I will also...
